- MailBug makes receiving email very easy. It automatically checks for incoming email while you are busy with other things, and alerts you when new email has arrived.
- MailBug has standard sized keys to make composing your email easy, and a bright backlit screen to make reading your email easy.
- MailBug shares your regular phone line, but it will never interrupt the line to connect when someone is using your phone. You can even read or compose email while you are on the phone.
- MailBug makes it easy for you to use email at home every day, without the added hassles of computer viruses (MailBug can't get them) and without giving family members access to unwanted Internet sites (MailBug can't access them). MailBug is just email, pure and simple. It helps you to keep in touch with friends and family, and helps you to save money on long distance calls. And it's very, very easy.

Does Landel MailBug really work?

Landel invented non-computer technology for email and has been using its proven technology to satisfy email customers in the US and around the world for years.

Is it “real” email even though there’s no computer?

call. MailBug email is every bit as real as computer-based email, except it's far easier. You can send and receive email to and from any valid email address, anywhere. Send email to AOL; get email from MSN; send email to the office; or whatever you need. Using MailBug for email is like using a computer for email, except without a computer.

If I get a Landel MailBug how much does the email service really cost?

When you buy a Landel MailBug you get Standard Email Service from Landel for only $9.95 per month, charged to your credit card on a monthly, quarterly, or annual basis. That's less than half of what the big Internet service companies charge. If you prefer to pay by check, you can get email service for $9.95 per month billed quarterly or annually. When you choose any annual option, you also get the 12th month absolutely FREE. There is no long service contract, no commitment, no risk – just an easy and affordable way to discover how easy email should really be.

A toll free access charge of $2.95 per month may apply in some areas, and where applicable it is billed along with the email service (monthly, quarterly, or annually). This toll free access charge is normally not required, because Landel provides local access covering thousands of locations throughout the USA. In the few cases where the toll free access is required, it's a great way to ensure that simple and reliable email service is available to anyone in the US, anywhere from Alaska to Wyoming.

What about online information like news and stock quotes?

As part of your $9.95 per month email service, your MailBug will also provide you with free online access to News, Stock Quotes, Sports Scores, and other information from the Internet with just the touch of a single button.

What about printing and attachments?

MailBug isn't a computer, so it doesn't connect to a computer printer. It can, however, print email to a standard fax machine. For more information, send an email to fax@landel.com. If you want to access computer-based attachments, mailbug.com email can also be accessed by a computer using either standard POP commands or through webmail, so you can archive, print, or view computer-based attachments if you wish. The MailBug itself, however, isn't made to display computer-based attachments.

Where can I get one?

Landel can help you get your own MailBug today. Landel will set up your MailBug for you so that it's ready to use when it arrives, and MailBug can be shipped anywhere in the USA.

Local access and toll free charges

Landel MailBug must dial a local number to access the Internet. Knowing the telephone number from which your Landel MailBug will make this local call enables us to find the proper local access number for you to use. Landel maintains thousands of local access numbers all across the country. In the rare instance that there is no local access number, Landel can provide access through a toll free number for a small $2.95 per month charge. Because there are so many local numbers available, this is generally not required. In the areas where no local access is available, toll free access allows your MailBug to connect to the Internet from anywhere in the U.S., including very rural locations, Alaska, and Hawaii. If a toll free charge applies to your area, we will contact you and confirm your approval before shipping your MailBug. For questions about local access, call us at 408-360-0490.

To make a local call from this location, you (select one):

- ___ dial seven digits without the area code
- ___ dial a 1 plus the seven digits, but no area code
- ___ dial 10 digits, the area code and the phone number, but no 1 is needed
